THAT AMOUNT SPENT IN 1925-26, COUNTY REPORT SHOWS.

BALANCE NOW $165,267

Teachers Last Year Were Paid Total of $286,177.52.—Average Levy Is 41 Cents Plus.

Operation of Nodaway County's schools cost a total of $391,807.47 during the year which ended June 30, according to a tabulation just completed by Fred Wright, deputy county clerk, and prepared for forwarding to Charles A. Lee, state superintendent of schools.

In addition to operating expenses, $26,053.23 was expended for buildings, sites, furniture, repairs and retirement of bonds, bringing the year's total expenditures to $417,860.70.

The schools started last year with a balance of $168,987.80, as shown by settlement with the county treasurer and treasurers of various school districts. The cash on hand for the ensuing year is $165,267.48.

Total receipts during the year were $414,140.38, divided as follows:

Teachers fund: From the state, by auditor's warrant in 1925, $27,359.33; interest on county fund in 1925, $6,979.12; interest on township fund, $1,258.16; railroad taxes, $11,180.76; current and back taxes, $193,324.71; tuition and miscellaneous, $18,843.74.

Building fund: Levy for sinking funds, $18,400; levy for interest funds, $10,125.55.

The grade and high school teachers of the county were paid $286,177.52, and incidental school expenses, including janitors, fuel, libraries, textbooks and school supplies, were $105,629.95.

Nodaway County has a permanent county school fund of $138,102.60 and permanent township funds aggregating $28,847.88, a total permanent school fund of $166,950.48. Only the interest on these funds are used each year. There are no permanent special district funds. During last year, $3,142 was received from fines, penalties, forfeitures, estrays and swamp land and added to the permanent county school fund.

With a valuation of $60,045,168 in 1925, the county had an average levy of 25 cents on the $100 valuation for teachers' salaries, 15 cents for incidental funds and 1 cent for interest and sinking funds, a total average levy of 41 cents plus.

The report states that there are no districts making no levy for school purposes; four with a levy of less than 20 cents; sixty-one with levies of 20 cents and less than 40; thirty-one with an even 40 cents; seventeen over 40 cents and less than 65; seven with even 65 cents, and twelve with a levy of more than 65 cents.

Shenandoah Tourists Begin Homeward Trip

Shipload of Globe Trotters Sails From Glasgow.—About 200 to Stay Abroad Until August 21.

According to the Shenandoah Evening Sentinel, the members of the Shenandoah Kiwanis club party of globe trotters sailed yesterday from Glasgow, the British Isles' most modern city, according to a cable dispatch received by that paper from its representative, R. K. Tindall. Several persons from Nodaway County are members of the party.

About two hundred of the 627 members will take advantage of the extension of time allowed them and will return August 21 on the Regina.

The change in plans to permit sailing from Glasgow instead of from Liverpool gave the vacationists an opportunity to view historic spots of Scotland and the beautiful and interesting Sir Walter Scott country.

A CHAUTAUQUA AGAIN IN 1927

CONTRACT IS SIGNED TODAY WITH REDPATH-VAWTER.

GUARANTEED BY MANY

Program Next Year to Be Six-Day Affair.—Profit Realized by Local Committee This Year.

Maryville is to have a Redpath-Vawter Chautauqua next year.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon the local committee signed a contract with Ross Dehner for the Redpath-Vawter company for next year's program.

The contract was signed after more than a hundred persons had signed the lists underwriting the project. The local committee circulated these lists at the Chautauqua last night. The rain prevented the circulation of the lists after the program was over, hence many persons were not solicited for signatures.

The Chautauqua next year will be a six-day proposition with a guarantee of $1,685. Indications are that the program this year will net the local committee something in the neighborhood of $250, which will be used as a nest egg for next year.

With the exception of a few names, others who signed the lists since yesterday's report are:

H. H. Mutz, Kenney Tebow, Weber McMillen, Vodre M. Willoughby, Alfred Walton, J. D. Mutz, Guy R. Mutz, the Rev. R. A. Mitchell, Mrs. R. A. Mitchell, Albert Appleby, S. H. Wells, Mrs. S. H. Wells, Wilber F. Williams, Mrs. Wilber F. Williams, Mrs. J. D. Richey, J. R. Evans.

Alfred Jones, Lester Looker, Elmer Dougherty, C. V. Ford, Mrs. George Wallace, H. S. Dowell, Robert Larmer, C. N. Johnson, F. R. Marcell, Mrs. A. J. Cauffield, Otis Lyle, J. W. Bookman, Russell Robey, J. H. Puckett, Charles Haggard, Mrs. Charles Haggard, Isaac Young.

G. H. Colbert, E. E. Bolin, Belva Hartman, F. S. King, J. D. Richey, Harry D. Jones, Mrs. Louella Landfather, Mrs. W. B. Price, L. J. Meadows, C. L. Gann.

Camp Holatchaway to Break Tomorrow A. M.

Children Well Fed if What They Consumed Today Is Indication.— Bathing Suit Cases Made.

Camp Holatchaway will break tomorrow morning after breakfast. The crowning event of the three-day outing for 4-H Club boys and girls of Nodaway, Holt, and Atchison counties will be tonight when there will be stunts galore. The public is invited.

That the children of the camp are not suffering from loss of appetite is reflected in the fact that at noon today they ate eight loaves of pullman bread, five pounds of butter, nine dozen roasting ears, one-half bushel of sliced tomatoes, three gallons of pineapple, nine boxes of macaroni, and two pounds of cheese.

A number of visitors were at the camp today. Among them were several girls from the Lasher, Swallow, and Rockford community clubs.

The girls of the camp today completed work on bathing suit cases made of oilcloth. Each girl designed and made her own bag, and all are unique.

The camp this year has been a decided success, according to J. Ross Fleetwood, county extension agent.

LONDON AS IT IS AND ISN'T

CHAUTAUQUA PLAY LAST NIGHT A PLEASURE TO ALL.

'WHAT ABOUT LEISURE'

Geoffrey Morgan Gives Some Interest Slants on Spare Time and How to Spend It.

The world loves to see a fellow beat his way back. There is nothing more readable than the story of the man or woman who overcomes hardship to attain a goal. There is nothing more enjoyable than a picture show in which the "under dog" fights his way to the surface and goes rambling off with the bacon tucked securily under his good right arm.

Because "So This Is London" was a realistically funny play at Chautauqua last night, it pleased the Maryville audience beyond expectation. But because the play company which presented this English-American comedy labored under difficulty after difficulty to do so, and because this play company surmounted a whole flock of obstacles in the presentation, the play went over with a bang, and the Maryville audience gingerly picked its way out of a rain-soaked tent in a plus-happy frame of mind.

Play Cast Is Altered.

Because of an automobile accident Saturday afternoon, the leading lady of the play company is still in a Shenandoah hospital. Her place last night was taken by another actress, whose place in turn was taken by another player, whose place again was taken by a "junior girl" who had been hastily summoned into the histrionic profession. Quite a dab of obstacles, eh wot, as they say in London.

The Maryville audience last night knew of these changes in the cast, and because the play went over successfully this same Maryville audience was all the happier because the "fellow had beaten his way back."

And then, to cap the climax, the rain fell in buckets or barrels right in the most important part of the play, and the cast was forced to stop the action and wait patiently until the storm subsided. But the audience was in a good humor, and the tent didn't leak, and the intermission didn't hurt the play one whit.

Take-off On Two Countries.

So, all in all, from every angle, "So This Is London" was a bally well acted bit, old chappie. The play included a take-off on both the English and American home, each in the popular conception of the other. Around these parts were woven bits of humor, common sense, and a charming little love story. The play was in three acts, the first two of which were nothing more or less than hymns of hate sung by America and England against one another.

But the third act, as all good third acts should be, was one of international good will and a marriage in which the blue blood of old England flowed into the millions of American plutocracy.

The parts were all played well. To the credit of the "junior girl" who was making one of her first appearances "on the boards" it may be said that the newness of the whole thing gave her just the correct amount of reserve for the English mother. The other characters were realistically good and funny.

Leisure Time a Problem.

Leisure time presents quite a problem, according to the lecture of Geoffrey Morgan, who talked yesterday afternoon.

"Leisure time is on the increase because of the steady growth of time and labor saving devices," Mr. Morgan said. "But what to do with this time is the real problem."

The speaker then outlined at length the growth of labor saving devices both in and out of the home. He made illustration after illustration of the things which are commonplace now but which were unknown a generation ago.

"Gas and juice are the world's two greatest words now. A generation ago our fathers knew both of these words. Gas was something which one should not blow out, and juice was what hit you in the eye when you squeezed a lemon.

"But 'gas' is gasoline now and 'juice' is electricity. It is on these two things that the increase of leisure time hinges."

Shelton and Robey Buy Skidmore News

T. A. Culley, Editor There for Six Years, Sells to Maryville Pair.—Deal Effective Yesterday.

T. A. Culley, editor for the past six years of the Skidmore News, today announced the sale of his paper to Charles M. Shelton and Russell Robey of Maryville. The new owners, former employes of the Democrat-Forum and Tribune, will publish the News under the firm name of Shelton and Robey. Mr. Robey will be editor.

Mr. Culley came to Skidmore from Kansas City in 1920, and since that time has published an excellent weekly paper. His plans for the future are undecided, he said today. He has a wife and one daughter.

The new owners took charge of the News yesterday and will publish this week's edition. The policy of the paper will be independent, Editor Robey announced.

Miss LoDaiska Shelton, daughter of the senior member of the firm, will assist in the collection of news. Mrs. Shelton and the other members of the family are still in Maryville but will move to Skidmore soon.

NEW ROOF ON CHURCH HERE

WORK IS IN CHARGE OF HENRY L. FOSTER.

EMPLOY DECORATORS

Well-Known Chicago Firm Awarded Contract By Christian Church Committee—Starts Next Week.

Reroofing of the First Christian Church building here is progressing rapidly and about one-third of it is already completed. A new roof of asbestos shingles is being put on and Henry L. Foster is in charge of the work.

A contract was let today to W. H. Peters and W. H. Peters, jr., of Chicago to decorate the interior of the church. These men are nationally-known decorators and have worked in public buildings throughout the United States. They will begin here next week and expect to be through within a month.

Biblical colors will predominate in the decorations, Mr. Peters said this morning.

Fred P. Robinson is in general charge of redecorating and remodeling the building. The other members of the committee are W. E. Goforth and John G. Mutz. The estimated cost of the work is $7,500.

A new floor covering will be put in the auditorium of the building and the light fixtures will also be replaced by new ones.

It is probable that several new windows will be put in and the others repaired. The contract for this work has not yet been let but it may be within the next few days.

It is believed that all of the work will be completed within two months. In the meantime, church and Sunday school services will be held in the Maryville High School.

Germans Celebrating Republic Constitution

Part Of Nation Stands By And Blames Present Ills On Republic—President At Ceremonies.

Berlin, Aug. 11.—Part of the German nation, numerically undeterminable but indicated by the recent plebiscite result, is today celebrating the seventh anniversary of the signing of the constitution of the republic.

The other part of the nation stands by, solemnly blaming all the ills of the present day and all changes from the glories of the empire on the republic. It is necessary for the sake of proper understanding of the German nation to point out those who are not joining in the celebration are not all monarchists or black reactionaries.

Germany is simply divided into a right and a left. All that is left is identified with the republic. All that is right, however, does not want kaiserism back, certainly not Wilhelm.

The right is considerably annoyed that President Hindenburg, with the entire cabinet, attended the celebration at noon today in the Reichstag and later the president inspected the Reichswehr guard of honor in front of the Reichstag where huge crowds gathered and sang "Deutschland Uber Alles."

DRYS WIN IN TWO STATES

VOTE IN OHIO AND NEBRASKA AGAINST WETS.

KLAN IS BIG FACTOR

Nearly Complete Victory in Alabama Primary—Atlee Pomerene Wins Senatorial Nomination.

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 11.—With the task of recording one of the heaviest votes ever polled in a primary in the state progressing slowly, Bibb Graves, Ku Klux Klan candidate, held a slight lead in the gubernatorial race late today.

No figures have been received from more than a half a dozen counties. Afternoon reports had cut Graves' lead over Charles P. McDowell to 1,500 in 400 of 1,800 precincts reported.

The Klan victory in the state will be made complete if Graves is nominated.

Hugo L. Black, Klan candidate to succeed U. S. Senator Oscar W. Underwood, retains a commanding lead over ex-governor Thomas E. Kilby and John W. Bankhead.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 11.—With Governor McMullen's majority in excess of the 50,000 mark with half the state still to be heard from, his supporters today were claiming his nomination by more than 100,000 majority.

McMullen will be opposed in November by Charles W. Bryan, brother of the famous Commoner. The Democratic candidate is former governor of Nebraska and vice-presidential candidate in 1924.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 11.—The drys put over two big winners in the Ohio primary yesterday, returns from almost half the state's precincts showed today.

Myers Cooper of Cincinnati, president of the Ohio Council of Churches, won the Republican nomniation for governor. Senator Frank B. Willis walked off with the Republican nomination for United States Senator.

In the Democratic Senatorial race, Atlee Pomerene, an acknowledged wet, defeated Judge Allen, a dry and an exponent of the world court. Pomerene's victory forecasts a bitter wet and dry battle in the November election.

John K. Sawyers, jr., An Election Winner

Former Maryville Boy Gets Prosecuting Attorney Nomination, Equivalent to Election, in Ohio County.

John K. Sawyers, jr., of Woodsfield, Ohio, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Sawyers, sr., of this city, was nominated in Ohio's primary election yesterday as the Democratic candidate for prosecuting attorney of Monroe County of which Woodsfield is the county seat. Sawyers defeated McDougall, who was running for his fifth term, by 450 votes. Since Monroe County is Democratic by about 2,800, nomination means election.

Sawyers is 31 years old and has been located at Woodsfield only since the first of the year. He was a member of the law firm of Lynch & Sawyers. He is a graduate of the Maryville high school, attended the State Teachers College here, had one year at the State University at Columbia, and was graduated from Muskinggum College at New Concord, Ohio, and the Western Reserve Law School at Cleveland. He was admitted to the bar in Maryville, and has also been admitted to the bar at Cleveland.

Monroe County is the old home of the Sawyers family.

Dope Addict Is Blamed for Veteran's Arrest

Wallace Ashe, Who Had Been Accused Of Murder, Victim Of False Information—Is Released.

Kansas City, Aug. 11.—Wallace Ashe, World War veteran, who was taken from his cot in the United States Veterans Hospital here last week served with a warrant charging him with the murder July 6 of Charles F. Landers, cashier, during the hold-up of the Crist Prairie State Bank at Dadeville and taken to the jail at Springfield to await hearing, was the victim of false information given police by a dope addict, officials stated today.

When Ashe arrived at Dadeville, no one could identify him as a participant in the hold-up and a certificate from the hospital here, forwarded to authorities, showed that Ashe was under treatment there from June 30 to July 11. The veteran was returned to Kansas City last night.

TECHNICALITY TO AID "MA"

SHE CLAIMS MOODY DIDN'T ACCEPT HER CHALLENGE.

READY FOR RUN-OFF

Youthful Attorney-General and Texas' First Woman Governor to Battle for Nomination.

Austin, Tex., Aug. 11.—A technicality in the acceptance by Dan Moody, youthful attorney-general of Texas, of her challenge that she would resign immediately if he beat her by one vote in the recent primary in Texas was given today by Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, Texas' first woman governor, as the reason she has not yet fulfilled the terms of her challenge although Moody beat her by many thousands of votes.

"I accept the challenge issued by Jim in his wife's name" is the phrase on which "Ma" bases her refusal to carry out her challenge. It is the phrase, she says, Moody used in accepting her challenge. Mrs. Ferguson claims that the challenge was her own and not that of Jim, her husband and former governor. The words used by Moody did not constitute an acceptance, Mrs. Ferguson contends.

During his campaign against Mrs. Ferguson, Moody had charged frequently that "Pa" who was impeached in 1917, was the real governor and "Ma" was only a figurehead behind which he continued his "rule of the stage."

This element entering into the acceptance sets the battle for the run-off contest for the Democratic nomination for governor as provided by the Texas election laws. The official count showed Moody 1,170 votes short of a majority of all votes cast. The Dallas election board certified both candidates.

The total rainfall last night and early this morning amounted to 1.07 inches, according to J. R. Brink, official weather observer. The moisture was badly needed for the growing crops and relieved the heat wave of the last few days.

MANY SLAIN IN NEW OUTBREAK

ALMOST 100 BELIEVED KILLED BY MEXICAN SOLDIERS.

FOR CHURCH PROPERTY

Crowds Attempt To Retain Possession —May Seize Other Interests of Catholics.

Rome, Aug. 11.—Mexican troops have fired on crowds before the Catholic churches in Mexico and there have been at least a hundred casualties, according to charges today by the Osservatore Romano, official organ of the Vatican.

The Osservatore declares that "despite the complacent silence of the government and press in Mexico there has been serious clashes."

Mexico City, Aug. 11.—Almost one hundred persons were killed in fighting for possession of the churches in the states of Michoacan, Jalisco and Guadalajara in connection with the dispute between the Catholic church and the government of Mexico, delayed reports indicated today.

Forty Catholics, including several priests, were killed in Michoacan alone, according to the archbishop of Michoacan, who arrived at the capital this morning with a tale of harrowing experiences. Seventeen of this number were cold-blooded executions, the archbishop said, perpetrated by the soldiers after victory had been conceded.

American officials have just received confirmation of reports that between fifty and sixty have been killed in the struggle for the possession of three churches in Guadalajara. The situation in Jalisco is regarded as grave although actual fighting appears to have ceased.

Mexico City, Aug. 11.—Attorney-General Ortega announced today that the government is considering the nationalization of hundreds of rich properties in Mexico which are in the possession of Catholic lay clergy. The title for the majority of these church properties rests with laymen but the attorney-general maintains that they are not actually the property of the Catholic church and that the title has been transferred to the lay clergy to avoid the constitutional provision against church-owned property.

Several of the largest estates in Mexico may be seized unless the lay owners can definitely prove they are actual owners and not merely holding the property for church benefits.

WOMEN SWIMMERS.

The most notable thing about Gertrude Ederle's success in swimming the English Channel was the fact that she was the first woman to perform that feat. It was the fact that she beat the records of all the men who had ever done it.

Since the Channel swim is recognized as the world's hardest swimming test, it follows that today this eighteen-year-old American girl is supreme in her sport. In our flambuoyant parlance, she stands forth as "swimming champion of all time."

That is, until another woman beats her record. That may happen any day.

And how about men? Some men may beat her, of course. Yet, here is one sport, and a particularly arduous sport at that, in which women, for some reason not yet fully understood, appear to possess natural superiority over men. If half a dozen men swam the Channel before Miss Ederle, it was probably because men so long had the field almost entirely to themselves. With women crowding in to compete for the honor, men may soon be outclassed in the greatest swimming classic as they have been frequently of late in minor contests.

It may not be any too good for the women physiologically, to engage in such strenuous contests, but in this age of feminine ambition and achievement it is very good for them mentally. And the athletic example set by feminine champions should benefit millions of women, if they disregard the competitive element and take up swimming or other sports for the sake of wholesome exercise.

M. CLEMENCEAU'S APPEAL.

The letter of M. Clemenceau asking for greater lienency toward France may tend to popularize the present cabinet in France and hold it together until it puts over its financial program but it certainly does not appear to be either a diplomatic or an appealing document in this country.

It is the appeal of a man 86 years of age. Since it is an open letter to the President of the United States published to all the world, it must be regarded as designed largely for home consumption rather than with the hope of changing sentiment in this country.

The attitude of the French leaders disregards the fact altogether that the United States came into the war and saved France from utter annihilation after furnishing supplies on which to make her stand. It is the attitude of an ox that has been pulled out of the ditch and then turns on its saviour. Also France has been very exacting that Germany live up to its agreements to the letter and the position it assumes with reference to the debts of France is exceedingly inconsistent to say the least.

FRONTIERS FOR COLLEGE MEN.

George A. Malcolm, associate justice of the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands, urges young college men to seek opportunities on "present-day frontiers". He explains:

"By frontiers I refer to ordinary geographical boundaries. The Philippines, Australia, Hawaii, are frontiers where opportunities abound for college trained men, but there opportunities go a-begging because in our changing social life, the immediate thing every college lad must have is success and he believes, curiously enough, that he is nearer attaining it if he gets a "white collar job' of little worth than if he dons overalls and learns the game from the bottom."

The desire for immediate success may be natural enough, but it is shortsighted. It does not allow for building a sound foundation of experience; it does not recognize the fullest meaning of "success', but is content with its superficial signs.

It takes a courageous pioneering spirit to tackle even "present-day frontiers," but anyone with faith in young America believes that there is plenty of such spirit left to make use of the judge's advice.

"Women don't dress to please men," claims a writer. No, they partly dress to please men.

We have laws to keep crazy people from marrying. But they never know they were crazy until too late.

Now somebody says the men are going to have beauty parlors of their own. And goodness knows, they need 'em.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

By Charles P. Stewart.
NEA Service Writer.

Washington.—To Dr. C. H. Parker there's nothing so very humorous in the supposedly funny pictures one occasionally sees of a missionary or a castaway sailor about to be eaten up by cannibals.

He had such an experience himself once and he says he's prepared to go bail that it isn't a bit amusing—except possibly to the cannibals.

Dr. Parker probably knows more about the South Sea islands than any other white man living. For 31 years he has lived in that part of the world, and now, after a short visit in this country, he and his wife are going back to die there, when their time comes.

The doctor is a graduate of the Seventh Day Adventists' College of Medical Evangelists, at Loma Linda (Cal.)

The College of Medical Evangelists argues like this:

A South Sea island cannibal falls sick. The other cannibals, untrained in medicine, don't know what to do for him.

Along comes a good doctor and cures him.

The cannibals, presumably, are grateful. At any rate, they have sense enough not to kill and eat their doctor. He's the only one they've got and nobody knows how soon somebody else will need to be cured by him.

Thus the missionary—the doctor turns out to be a missionary—gains time enough to convert his patients.

That's the way Dr. Parker worked it.

Powdered Bare Legs Again Fad in London

London. — Stockingless stockings have again become fashionable in London during the recent hot weather.

Special shades of powder are used on bare legs to give them the appearance of being clad with flesh colored stockings. One well-known society figure was recently observed to have painted a faint line down the back of her leg to simulate the seam of a stocking.

American Co-ed Marries Into Hindu Family; Held Prisoner for Sale to Rich Nobleman

Editor's Note:

Chicago, Aug. 11.—The story of an American university co-ed, who, according to her sworn testimony, married into a family of native rulers of India, was kept in a harem and offered for sale to an Indian prince, was revealed here when Betty Kurlow was granted a divorce on July 27 from Abani Kumar Bose by Judge Joseph Sabath.

The girl, now living with her parents here after her escape ffom India and subsequently divorced, has consented to write her adventure for the United Press. In obtaining her divorce, Miss Kurlow testified that she met Bose while both were students at Northwestern University. His strange Oriental personality fascinated her and she married him. Despite his promise to stay in America, she testified, he persuaded her to go to India for a short visit. There, after hardships and illness in a jungle home where she trembled at the roar of tigers and hiss of snakes, her adventures culminated in an unsuccessful attempt at suicide. She was treated and aided by a British physician and finally was enabled to return to America.

In the following article she tells how she met and was won by Bose, member of an upper classe Brahmin family who virtually were feudal lords over the natives in the vicinity of the little village of Barodi.

By Betty Kurlow.
Written for the United Press.

Chicago, Aug. 11—Romance is a wonderful thing to an 18-year-old college girl, especially romance which includes a Hindu nobleman, dreams of castles, landed estates and travels around the world. But when romance winds up in the midst of a jungle, with the prince turned into a heavy drinker and the castle a pest-infested hut, romance soon fades into reality.

When I married Abani Kumar Bose, ruler of Barodi, India, I laughed at Kipling's famous line about the east and west. And when I got my divorce, I realized that Kipling has been vindicated again—as he always is when a girl from the west and a man from the east try to demonstrate that he was wrong.

I first saw Abani when both of us were studying at Northwestern University near Chicago. He was handsome, tall, dark and mysterious. He always seemed industrious and unassuming. He was cultured and polite. His accent, his whole make up was totally different from that of the American college man. And I was only 16 years old.

One day after class—it was in 1917—we met on the campus. I was thrilled. He told me of his home in India, of the great palace he lived in, of the enormous estate his family owned in East Bengal, he was studying at the university, he was at the behest of his elder brother, who wanted him to learn American social and business customs.

And Abani seemed to have become thoroughly Americanized, except for the color of his skin, his turban and his beautiful flashing smile. Now that I think it over, I believe it was his smile that I really "fell" for. After the first meeting we were together often. To think that an Indian prince had singled me out for his attentions swept me off my feet. And he was so kind, so handsome, so suave. He was the most romantic love maker that I have ever seen.

When we were returning from the theater one night, Abani asked me, Betty Kurlow, native of Chicago, University freshman, 18-year-old girl, to marry him.

I asked him but one thing—that we live in America. Abani promised and we were married quietly, almost secretly in a small Chicago church. No one but my family knew of our marriage. Mother and father both opposed but later they came to like Abani. No one could resist his wonderful personality.

We established ourselves in a small apartment and lived in Chicago almost a year in perfect peace and happiness. I quit school and kept house for him while he continued his studies.

When we had lived there almost 12 months Abani wrote to his family in Calcutta and told them of our marriage. They were furious. His brother sent Abani a scathing letter denouncing him for marrying "an unclean one."

It was then that I first noticed a hint of stubborness, of vindictiveness in my husband—two qualities which he developed so surprisingly later on.

(In her next article she tells how she learned her husband was an anti-white agitator; how the family priest objected to her race and how she was forced to seclude herself in the family "palace" in the heart of the jungle.)

Cuba—A new city well is to be drilled here at a cost of $200. Business men subscribed $100 of the total cost and the City Council appropriated the remaining sum.

Woman Surprises Friends

"After a spell of typhoid fever 7 years ago I began to suffer from indigestion and gas in my stomach and colic attacks. This gradually became so bad that my doctor advised an operation for gall stones. A friend advised me to try MAYR'S Remedy which I did with splendid results. My friends were astonished at my rapid improvement. I have no more bloating and can eat anything I wish." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract, and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded at all druggists.—Advertisement.

First Flight Over South Pole Will Set Forth Next October

Buenos Aires—Organization of a new South Pole air expedition to be initiated next October, has been announced here by Anton Pauly, Austian engineer and explorer, whose intention is to conduct the first airplane trip to the bottom of the earth.

Pauly plans to start from Buenos Aires in a sailing ship near the end of October in order to make the coast of Graham Land about the middle of November. According to plan, the ship will land the expedition on Wandel Island at 65 degrees south latitude, where the primary base of operations will be established.

The next step will be the establishment of another base 10 degrees farther south. Eight trips by airplane are calculated to be sufficient to transfer food and fuel supplies to this point which will be 300 miles nearer the Pole. Following the establishment of this last base the party will digress temporarily from its prime goal to make explorations in the Weddell Sea and to Charcot Land.

Following these explorations a final preparatory move will be made to a point at 80 degrees south latitude, 600 miles nearer the Pole than the previous base. This point is calculated to have an altitude of 6,000 feet above sea leved, and from here the flyers will make their dash to the South Pole, a flight of 600 miles.

According to Pauly's statement the Pole is a plateau 1,000 feet high. He states: "We will stop at the Pole long enough to make necessary observations and to try to find messages left there by Captain Scott in 1922. We shall then continue the flight to Wales Bay, where we hope to find the deposit left by Amundsen. This distance is about 660 miles, making the whole flight from our 80 degree base nearly 1300 miles."

In the actual flight across the polar region Pauly plans to carry two passengers beside himself, a pilot, observer and mechanic. Two months' food supplies and equipment for a sledge expidition to be used in case of accident to the plane will complete the cargo carried on the flight.

No time limit has been set for the expedition which is expected to end at Melbourne, Australia. Pauly is confident of his success and is laying careful plans to insure against mistakes in preparation. He has long been associated in ventures of exploration and research.

MR. "AVERAGE MAN" RISES TO OCCASION

Power to Meet Emergency, Common to All.

The average man, so we are told, is honest. Diogenes, for all the light of his penny lantern, could not find him, and the editors, who have been looking for him ever since, haven't found him either. He may be honest, that average man! he may be strong for family life; he may never look the other way when the plate goes by at church, nor pass Sally in her blue straw on the corner without a dime to match her smile. He may belong to the Kiwanis, and always land on the green in five—they say he does. I don't know. I never saw him.

No; I never saw him, and the man who saw him I never saw either. The truth is either an advertising agent invented him, or else the department stores did. Have you ever tried on the average man's coat at Fittem & Chargitt's as I have? The name on the tag gives it away. It is sure to be a "medium stout" or anything which shows it's not just plain average.

If I were a king in a fairy story, and did not want to lose my daughter, when I advertised for a husband in the regular way, I should simply give notice that the first average man who turned up should marry her—and then I'd keep her to make my green old age very comfortable.

There was a time when I thought otherwise. In the days when we were all slender, and our hair grew very black, it was my job to try to revamp the old Atlantic Monthly. For a time it did not occur to me that our subscribers were average people. How could they be, reading those austere, unillustrated pages? Well, I began printing pieces which happened to interest me and the normal, natural people who were my friends. What happened was surprising. The circulation grew every month a little more, until it was about ten times what it had been. They were all ordinary people reading it. But had not they something which led each in his individual way to want a magazine that made no conscious appeal to the ordinary average man?

Did you ever notice in reading the story of a fire or of a sinking ship, or of an engine tumbled over an embankment, how the "average" man behaves? Was there ever such a story which did not have a hero? And what is a hero but the average man when the call comes to him, and he forgets he can't do things, and does them?

There is a story in tonight's paper of an average cop. He had sworn, it seems, not to use his own revolver, lest some bystander be injured. That was a natural, average thing to do, and when the crook he had just arrested broke away the cop went after him with his bare hands. Once the crook shot, twice, three times; then the fourth bullet landed in the policeman's abdomen, but he went right on, clinched with the thief, turned his own weapon on him, killed him in his tracks, and was carried off to a hospital to die. Not an unusual story but one which gives you a little more confidence that the chap next you will do his bit when the time comes! And perhaps you will, too.

William James wrote a wonderful essay on the energies of men. He tells how the runner will keep his stride while his heart is bursting within him and his backbone knocks against his ribs. He comes to the utter end, and then suddenly, marvelously, comes the new wind. The muscles tauten, his breath ripples easily, and he is off to win the race.

That is the miracle which comes to all of us, which makes every man know in his secret heart that he is just a little better than the next, and that he can win. "I," he whispers to himself, "am a Jones. My father was a Jones, before me. Of course I can win—why, after all, they are only average men."—Ellery Sedgwick in Collier's.

"DOODLE BUG" TO FIND ORE

NEW INSTRUMENT TO BE USED IN FINDING COPPER.

COMPASS PRINCIPLE

When Held Over Deposit Of Iron, Needle Points Downward And Approximate Depth Is Also Determined.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 11.—Plans are under way for geological mapping of the upper peninsula copper region to discover possible undeveloped beds of ore, according to R. A. Smith, state geologist, and the scientists making the survey will locate the rock and ore layers with a "doodle bug."

But the "bug" to be used differs markedly from those with which "witches" claim to be able to locate oil and water under the surface of the ground. It is a scientific instrument invented by President W. O. Hotchkiss of Michigan State College of mines.

Professor Hotchkiss' "Doodle bug" is really a compass, mounted laterally instead of horizontally. When the instrument is held over an iron deposit, the needle is deflected downword and the extent of the deflection shows the approximate depth of the iron deposit, according to Smith.

Instruments of similar principle have been used for years in locating iron ore. They are not exceptionally sensative, however, and Professor Hotchkiss is attempting to fit the principle of the iron needle to "mapping" the unique geological formations in the upper peninsula. His instrument is said to be twenty times as sensitive as any device ever used for the purpose.

Beats Wife; Arrested on Murder Charge

Budapest.—Beating his wife and daughter one time too often caused the arrest of a Hungarian peasant of Csongrad for a murder committed twenty-three years ago.

One night during September 1903, this peasant rushed home greatly excited. In reply to his wife's questioning he confided to her that he had just killed a neighbor during a quarrel.

No clue was ever found concerning the perpetrator of the crime. Everyone in Csongrad forgot about the affair; and no one would ever have given another thought to it had not the murderer, now seventy-four years old, recently got into the habit of beating his wife and daughter.

After one especially severe beating his wife confided the father's crime to her daughter. The daughter promptly went to the wife of the murdered man and told her about it. These two went together to the police and exposed the chiminal.

New Cancer Serum Found to Cure Rats

London.—A cancer serum making rats immune is described in the annual report of the British Empire cancer Campaign. Dr. Thomas Lumsden of the Lister Institute, performed experiments on fifty rats successfully, according to the report.

Injection of the appropriate serum in malignant tumors in the feet of rats, the report indicates, caused the tumors to disappear. Temporary stoppage of circulation in the part affected is a part of the procedure. It was found, the report declares, that two tomors in different feet of a rat could be made to vanish by treatment of only one and that rats which had been subjected to the serum treatment were immune to subsequent attacks of cancer.

Drive to Counteract Attitude of Antagonism

Washington, Aug. 9.—Steps to counteract the attitude of antagonism which exists against the United States in some big industrial centers abroad as a result of the operation of the American tariff has been launched by the government, it was learned today. Coming at a time when considerable anti-American feeling has been aroused abroad over war debt settlements, the drive may take on something of a political as well as economic aspects, according to officials.

Thomas O. Marvin, chairman of the tariff commission, expects to sail for Europe August 11, while E. P. Costigan of the tariff commission sails today. The announced purpose of the trips is an inspection of the commissioner's foreign staff.

Wolves on Increase in Soviet Russia

Moscow.—The Soviet Government is preparing to offer all possible cooperation and encouragement to hunters who are trying to exterminate wolves. Wolves have been increasing in numbers because of the neglect of hunting during the stormy years of the Revolution, and today their numbers in Russia proper, excluding the affiliated Ukrainian, White Russian and Transcaucasian Republics, is estimated at a hundred thousand.

During winter months wolves sometimes invade peasant villages and small towns and cases have been reported in which they attacked trains and were only beaten off after a desperate battle. Approximately a million cattle are killed by wolves every year; and the losses which they inflict on the peasant population are reckoned in tens of millions of rubles. Cases of attacks on human beings are also not infrequent.

THIRD HOUSE BROKEN INTO

O. P. FISHER IDENTIFIES PURSE FOUND YESTERDAY.

ALL ON MONDAY NIGHT

Sheriff Urges Prompt Report to Authorities, Without Disturbing Conditions as Found.

A third house breaking in Maryville Monday night was revealed late yesterday when the purse with the initials, "O. P. F.," found under the banister on the porch of Bert Null yesterday morning, was identified as belonging to O. P. Fisher, who lives across the street from the Null home, on South Buchanan street.

The Fisher home was entered the same night as the Ira Kelley and J. L. Partridge houses, reported to the police and sheriff's office yesterday.

Mr. Fisher, who is a substitute mail carrier at the local postoffice, said he had about $30 or $35 in his purse. He did not discover his loss until late yesterday afternoon. He said his sister heard some noises early yesterday morning and then heard a car starting on Main street, just east of their house. Shortly after that time, the clock struck the hour of four. Nothing much was thought about the noises at that time, Mr. Fisher said.

No other new developments in the series of robberies were reported today. No reports were received today of any houses being entered last night.

"If persons would only report robberies to us at once, leaving things just as they are, without calling in all the neighbors first, we would have a much easier time finding the guilty parties," Sheriff Lowell B. Campbell said this morning.

"Very often objects from which we could take finger prints have been so much handled by others that detection of the robbery by that means is almost impossible. Other clues may be covered up or destroyed."

In support of his theory that "local talent" is reponsible for the three robberies, the sheriff said.

"When I see men who never work but who always seem to have a roll of bills, good clothes and an automobile that runs day and night, with no place apparent from which they get the money then there is something wrong. I have to work for mine."

Medics Would Change State Practice Act

Christian Scientists' Beliefs Would Be Recognized in Missouri.

Jefferson City, Aug. 11.—Missouri's medical practice act would be strengthened and Christian Scientists and other religious sects believing in treatment by prayer or other spiritual means, would be exempted from the provisions of the state medical law under a proposed series of amendments approved here late yesterday by members of the executive committee, the council and legislative committee of the Missouri State Medical association. About 30 members of the association, members of the three groups of the organization, attending the meeting.

The exemption of religious sects from complying with the act, except in the case of quarantine regulations, pertaining to contagious diseases, will end a long battle waged before, the last session of the legislature by Christian Scientists and adherents to other beliefs to enable them to practice healing by prayer and spiritual means. A particularly hard fight occurred in the 1925 session of the legislature over the matter.

The proposed amendment, which, together with the others approved, will be submitted to the legislature next January, provides that "this article shall not be construed as interfering with any religious beliefs in the treatment of disease, provided that quarantine regulations relating to contagious diseases are not infringed upon."

A number of "teeth" would be placed in the state medical act under the other proposed amendments. One of the principal changes would be to alter the provision that any person would be entitled to take the state medical examinations for medical license so long as they possessed a diploma of four years standing in any reputable medical school or college so that they would have to furnish "satisfactory evidence" of having attended at least four terms of nine months each and of having received a diploma from some reputable medical college that enforces four terms of nine months each requirements."

Another change would raise the average grade necessary for a candidate to pass the state medical examination from 70 to 75 per cent. Still another proposed amendment would allow any person who has been passed by the national board of medical examiners of the United States to practice medicine in Missouri.

Reciprocity between Missouri and other states which recognize the medical graduates of this state's examination would be provided by another of the changes. Under this provision a physician licensed in another state which recognizes Missouri's graduates could practice in this state, and vice versa.

Under another of the amendments, the secretary of the state board of health could investigate any reported or apparent violation of the state's medical act and order prosecutions through prosecuting or circuit attorneys in the various counties and cities.

The GIRL in the MIRROR

By Elizabeth Jordan

COPYRIGHT BY THE CENTURY COMPANY

THE STORY.

CHAPTER I.—Barbara Devon's wedding and departure of her honeymoon leaves her brother "Laurie," successful playright but somewhat inclined to wildness, without her restraining influence. His theatrical associates, Rodney Bangs and Jacob Epstein, promise to "keep an eye on him."

CHAPTER II. — Laurie, who is wealthy, refuses to settle down to work, announcing his intention of resting and seeking "adventure." From his window in New York he sees the reflection of a beautiful girl in a mirror in the house opposite.

CHAPTER III.—Devon learns from the elevator boy in the girl's house that her name is Mayo. Again in the mirror's reflection he sees her with a revolver and fears she means to commit suicide. He breaks into her apartment and, winning her confidence, induces her to lunch with him, though she warns him of "danger."

CHAPTER IV.—Perceptibly agitated by the arrival of a man in the restaurant, she mutters that he has "found her." Learning that she is unmarried and the man has no claim on her, Laurie, incensed, accosts the stranger.

CHAPTER V.—Accusing the man of annoying Miss Mayo, Devon warns him to end his espionage. The stranger is politely sarcastic, but from him Laurie learns the girl's first name is Doris. She tells him her persecutor is Herbert Ransome Shaw.

Laurie was following his own thoughts. Sonya was in town! Then, however complicated his problem, it was already as good as solved.

"My dinner will be up soon," suggested Louise. "Are you dining with me?"

He glanced at his watch, reproachfully shook his head at it, and rose.

"Three hours of me are all you can have this time. But I'll probably drop around about dawn tomorrow."

"Nice boy!" Her hot hand caught his and held it. "Laurie, if—if—I should send for you suddenly sometime—you'd come and—stand by?"

All the gaiety was wiped from his face. His brilliant black eyes, oddly softened, looked into her haughty blue ones with sudden understanding.

"You bet I will! Any time, anything! You'll remember that? Send for me as if I were Bob. Perhaps you've forgotten it," he added, more lightly, "but I happen to be your younger brother.

For a moment her face twisted. The mask of her arrogance fell from it.

"Bob didn't know," she said. "If he had felt the least suspicion he wouldn't have gone so far, or for so long. I thought I had three or four months—"

Laurie bent and kissed her cheek.

"I'm coming in every day," he said, and abruptly left the room.

In the lower hall he stopped to take in the full real realization of what he had discovered. Louise, superb, arrogant, beautiful Louise, was really ill, desperately ill. A feeling of remorse mingled with his sense of shock. He had believed her a sort of nervous hypochondriac. He had so resented her excessive demands on Barbara that it was only since he had seen much of her in this last month that he had been able whole-heartedly to like and admire her.

As he stood silent, he become conscious of another presence—an august, impressive one, familiar in the past but veiled now, as it were, in a midst of human emotion. It was Jepson, the butler. He coughed humbly.

"Hexcuse me, sir," he faltered. "But Mrs. Hordway h'ain't quite so well lately, sir. 'Ave you hobserved that?"

Laurie nodded. "I noticed it today," he admitted.

"She's losin' strength very fast, sir. Hall of us 'as seen it. Cook says she don't eat nothing. And Susanne and the nurse says it's 'ard work to get 'er from the bed to 'er chair—"

Laurie checked these revelations.

"Has the doctor been here today?"

"Yessir, two of 'em 'ave been 'ere. Doctor Speyer comes hevery day. This morning 'e brought Doctor Hames again. Hit's very hupsetting, sir, with 'er brother away and hall."

The man was genuinely anxious. Laurie tried to reassure him.

"She may be better in a day or two," he said more buoyantly than he felt. And here's my telephone number. If anything goes wrong, call me up immediately. Leave a message if I'm not there."

"Yessir. Thank you, sir." Jepson was pathetically grateful and relieved. He had the English servant's characteristic need of sanction and authority.

When Laurie reached his rooms, he called Sonya on the telephone. Like Jepson, he was feeling rather overwhelmed by his responsibilities. It was a relief to hear Sonya's deep, colorful voice.

"Didn't know you were here till just now," he told her. "I'm coming to see you in the morning. I want to talk to you about a lot of things."

"Including Mrs. Ordway?" suggested Sonya.

"Yes. You saw her today. You noticed—"

"Of course. Samuel is to be operated on tomorrow. I'll send him back to Devon House with his mother in a few days, as soon as he can safely travel, and I shall stay right here."

"That's splendid of you!"

"It's what Barbara and Mr. Warren would wish. And Mrs. Ordway, too, I think, though she would never suggest it."

"I'm sure it is."

Laurie hung up the receiver with a nervous hand. To a youth of twenty-four it is a somewhat overpowering experience to discover that destiny is especially busy over the affairs of two women for whom he has assumed a definite responsibility. As he turned from the instrument its bell again compelled his attention. He took up the receiver, and the voice of a girl came to his ear. A week or two ago he had rather liked that voice and its owner, a gay, irresponsible, good-hearted little creature who pranced in the front row of an uptown pony ballet. Now he listened to it with keen distaste.

"Hello, Laurie," it twittered. "Is that you? This is Billie. Listen. I gotta plan. A bunch of us is goin' out to Gedney to supper tonight. We're goin' to leave right after the show. Are you on?"

Laurie got rid of the fair Billie. He did it courteously but very firmly. A rather unusual degree of firmness was necessary, for Miss Billie was not used to having her invitations refused. She accepted the phenomenon with acute unwillingness and very lingeringly.

Bangs was not at home, to divert his chum's mind with his robust conversation. As he dressed for his call on Doris, the sharp contrasts of life struck Laurie with the peculiar force with which they hit the young and the inexperienced.

But were they really contrasts? On the one side were Louise, dying, and Doris, seemingly eager to die. On the other were Billie and her friends—foolish little butterflies, enjoying their brief hour in the secret garden of life, eternally chattering about "good times," playing they were happy, perhaps even thinking they were happy, but infinitely more tragic figures than Louise and Doris. Yet a week ago he had thought they amused him!

Pondering on these and other large problems, he absently removed the bloom from three fresh white ties.

CHAPTER VII.

Griggs Gets an Order.

At eight o'clock Laurie found Doris sitting under the shade of a reading-lamp in her studio, deep in the pages of a sophisticated French novel and radiating an almost oppressive atmosphere of well-being.

Subconsciously, he resented this. His mood was keyed to tragedy. But he returned her half-serious, half-mocking smile with one as enigmatic, shook hands with grave formality, and surveyed with mild interest a modest heap of bank-notes of small denominations that lay on the table, catching the room's high lights. Following his glance, Doris nodded complacently.

"I left them there for you to see," she remarked.

"Did the kind gentleman under the three balls give you all that?"

"He did. Count it."

"Don't be so arrogant about your wealth. It's fleeting. Any copy-book will tell you so."

She opened a small drawer in the table, swept the bills into it, and casually closed it. Laurie stared.

"Are you going to leave it there? Just like that?"

She looked patient.

"Why not?"

"I begin to understand why you are sometimes financially cramped."

He took the bills, smoothed them out flat, rolled back the rug to the edge of the table, laid the money under it, and carefully replaced the rug.

"That's the place to put it," he observed, with satisfaction. "No one connected with a studio ever lifts a rug. Bangs and I used to throw our money under the furniture, and pick it up as we needed it; but others sometimes reached it first. This way is better. How lovely you look!" he added. As he spoke he comfortably seated himself on the other side of the reading-lamp, and moved the lamp to a point where it would not obstruct his view of her.

She did look lovely. She had put on an evening gown, very simply made, but rich in the Oriental coloring she loved. She was like Louise in that. Laurie's thoughts swung to the latter's sick-room, and his brilliant young face grew somber. The girl lounging in the big chair observed the sudden change in his expression. She pushed a box of cigarettes toward him.

"Smoke if you like," she said, indifferently. "All my friends do."

He caught the phrase. Then she had friends!

"Including Herbert Ransome Shaw?" he asked, as he lit a match.

"Don't include him among my friends! But—he was here this afternoon."

"He was!" In his rising interest Laurie nearly let the match go out. "What did he want?"

"To warn me to have nothing to do with you."

"I like his infernal cheek!"

Laurie lit the cigarette and puffed at it savagely. Then, rising, he drew his chair forward and sat down facing her.

"See here," he said quietly, "you'd better tell me the whole story. I can't help you much if I'm kept in the dark. But if you'll let me into things—And before I forget it," he interrupted himself to interject, "I want to bring a friend of mine to call on you. She will be a tower of strength. She's a Russian, and one of the best women I know."

At Eight o'Clock Laurie Found Doris Sitting Under the Shade of a Reading Lamp in Her Studio.

She listened with a slight smile.

"What's her name?"

"Miss Orleneff, Sonya Orleneff, a great pal of my sister's and an all-around good sort. I'd like to bring her in tomorrow afternoon. Will five be convenient?"

"No." She spoke now with the curtness of the morning. "In no circumstances," she added, decisively.

"But—why?"

He was dazed. If ever a knight errant worked under greater difficulties than these, Laurie told himself, he'd like to know the poor chap's name.

"I have no wish to meet Miss Orleneff."

WHY YOUR DIET NEEDS SOME COARSE FOOD

The Digestive Processes Cannot Function Properly If Only Concentrated and Denatured Victuals Are the Bases of Your Meals.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator From New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

Very frequently I tell you about Sir Arbuthnot Lane of London. He is a famous surgeon, having a world-wide reputation. In the practice of his specialty this great man has done a great deal of good, but I am sure that in his sure advanced years he has done far more good by his preaching about proper eating than he ever did with the scalpel.

Dr. Lane believes that most of the ills of the human family come from the eating of concentrated and denatured foods. He points out that civilization has directed men along new ways. These paths lead away from natural eating in the direction of restaurants and cafes where the wrong dishes are ordered.

Of course those of us who are interested in right living and right eating are laughed at a good deal because of the advice we volunteer. In spite of this, however, I want to say that you must eat a certain amount of bulky foods if you are going to have good digestion.

In the beginning, men lived off the fields and forests. They ate fruits and nuts. Edible roots and even the bark of trees were included in their diet. As they grew more skillful in such things they caught fish and killed animals for food.

But you see all the things they ate were coarse foods, rough foods, bulky foods. They were not the refined, soft, mushy kinds of foods. They had real substance, material upon which the intestines could act.

I have no objection to the modern foods and even to many of the exotic foods. I do insist, however, that in addition to these or accompanying their use, the bulky foods must be consumed.

The reason we talk about spinach and lettuce and cabbage and celery is because these fibrous vegetables have substance enough to furnish the bulk required for the sake of digestion. Bread made of whole wheat or coarse flour has a peculiar virtue in that it gives substance as well as mineral nourishment.

Please get no wrong impression by what I am saying to you. Crazy folks eat nails and wire and swallow links of chains. Of course the mere doing of these things show they are crazy, but you would be almost as much lacking in good sense if you were to overdo the matter in the taking of rough foods. All the things you eat should be thoroughly chewed and not sent to the stomach in such form as to produce harm by their mere presence.

The more you know about foods, the more likely you are to select a meal which combines the elements needed for your physical welfare. It is a great mistake to sit down to a meal made up exclusively of hot biscuits, maple syrup, strawberry shortcake and a piece of pie. You must include in your meal protein food such as you get out of meat or cheese or milk.

You must have food containing the minerals needed to give strength to the bones and fingernails and the hair, as well as for the blood and other tissues of the body. Then if you add green vegetables and fruit, particularly if you take a salad of some sort, you are giving your digestive organs the combination of foods which will make for your health and vigor.

"DRY ICE" IN A SHIPMENT HERE

The Refrigerating Agent's Temperature Is 110 Below Zero.

The first carload of perishable foodstuffs to be shipped into Kansas City, using "dry ice" for refrigerating, was received today by the Mid-Central Fish Company, 1656 Washington street. The car contained twenty-four thousand pounds of fish from New York.

"Dry ice" is made from carbon dioxide gas cooled down to 110 degrees below zero and compressed into a solid frozen mass. It does not melt and is perfectly dry to touch. It evaporates slowly.

When the cargo of fish was placed in the car at New York last Wednesday eight boxes, containing a total of eighteen hundred pounds of the ice, were placed with it. When the car arrived here approximately one-half of the ice had evaporated. It was sent over the Lackawanna and Wabash railroads.

Officials of the Wabash railroad estimated it would require about three times as much regular ice to keep the fish in good condition on the trip and that would have required three replenishments.

The ice costs 5 cents a pound. The total cost for refrigerating the cargo of fish was about $90. The extra expense, about $60 a car, over the cost of ordinary ice, was justified by the assurance that the fish will be kept in perfect condition while in transit, an official of the Mid-Central company said.

Paid in Full

Eleven years ago Charles F. Glavin, Escanaba (Mich.) grain merchant, failed with liabilities of more than $200,000. His creditors have just received checks from him paying the last of this indebtedness, although he was legally obligated to pay but 6 per cent of the total.

Asks $100,625 for Him

When Bob Moses Grove, sensational Mackian flinger, cost the lean and lanky Mr. Connie Mack $100,600 it was thought the high price for baseball players had been reached. But along comes Otto Borchert, owner of the Milwaukee Brewers, asking even more for his youthful centerfielder phenom, Fred Schulte (pictured above). Borchert has placed a figure of $100,625 on the youngster's services—and only a year ago Schulte was just a semi-pro pastimer on the sandlots of Iowa.

German Officers Don't Like Ridiculing Suits

Berlin.—Insults recently directed at the uniform of the former imperial army have provoked a vigorous protest from the Army Officers League.

Caricatures and affronts, aimed at the military uniform of the ex-kaiser's troops, abounded throughout Germany during the heated political campaign preceding the national referendum on the ex-royalties' property claims.

In their protest, the ex-officers demand a strict government investigation and punishment of the offenders.

Socialist circles ridicule the protest and defend the mocking of the former imperial army. Observers insist that the protest itself shows a strengthening of the reactionary forces in Germany.

Closing Grain Review.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—Grain prices generally closed at the day's lowest levels on the Chicago Board of Trade. British government reports caused an upward trend in the market early in the day but when these were discounted by private reports profit taking tumbled prices to their present levels.

The break in corn was not quite as sharp as in the major pits. Prices were only ⅜ to ⅞ cent under the previous close. Demand was poor and offerings were light. Cash prices were about a cent higher.

Oats followed the other grains, prices sagging 1 to 1⅛ cents.

Provisions were 10 to 20c cents off with grain and hog prices.

English Healthier Says Medical Officer

London.—Increased sobriety, simpler and common-sense dress and a general dietary improvment is making England healthier, according to Sir George Newman, Chief Medical Officer of the Ministry of Health.

"Good houses, good food and a sanitary environment in working conditions make for health," Sir George declared," but these things cost money and are out of the reach of many people.

"The simpler things such as more tooth brushes, more windows and a more general appreciation of sunshine and fresh air, are easily within the reach of every one, however, and are making for a healthier people in England."

CO-OPERATION NEEDED

Authorities Require Aid Of All To Perform Their Duties Well, Detective Tells Jewelers.

Philadelphia, Aug. 11.—There are two governments in this country, the government of the law-abiding and that of the underworld, said Herbert S. Mosher, of Pinkerton's National Detective Agency, in an address here today before the annual convention of the American National Retail Jewelers' Association.

Mosher emphasized the thorough organization of criminals, pointing out they spend months planning robberies and making every arrangements in advance, even to the extent of securing counsel and bail in case they are arrested.

"The crooks get the lay of the land, study the protective features, calculate the chances of getting caught, and frequently arrange for the sale of the loot before the job is pulled," Mosher said. "This calls for a business organization and has resulted in the setting up of the so-called government of the underworld.

"This underworld government has its secret codes of communication from one city to another and often counsel and bail in the event of arrest."

This organization of the underworld can only be coped with by equal cooperation on the part of the public, Mosher said.

"Citizens who shirk jury duty and will not aid the authorities in prosecutions are playing into the hands of crooks," he declared. "It is your duty to give your police and prosecuting authorities all the help you can to have criminals convicted and after conviction you should use your influence to see that the prisoner is not given a parole or pardon."

Mosher urged the jewelers to take more adequate measures to protect their establishments, pointing out that crooks of today never take unnecessary chances.

"If a jewelery store, or any other place of business, is protected, the crooks will let it alone," he said. "That is why more than 94 per cent of the 6,000 members of the Jewelers' Security Alliance have not been molested. When you stop to think of it, it is really remarkable that 94 out of every hundred jewelers who belong to this crime fighting organization have not lost a dollar to the criminal horde. More than a third of those who sustained losses were victims of window smashings after closing hours.

"These figures show that criminals, as a rule, act deliberately and are not drug addicts who rob while under the influence of dope."

Big Road Contract to C. H. Atkinson Co.

Project From Fairfax to Point Near Craig Will Cost $144,000—Length Is Twelve Miles.

Contracts for the biggest road construction project in northwest Missouri to occupy the attention of the state highway department this year have been awarded to the C. H. Atkinson Paving Company of Watertown, S. D., and the cost will run well over $100,000. The project will extend from Fairfax in Atchison County to a point near Craig in Holt County. Details of the work have been received at the division offices of the department in St. Joseph.

The Atkinson firm will grade and bridge the road from Fairfax southward to a point two miles east of Craig, where it will connect with that portion of Route 1 already improved by grading. The total cost of the project will be $144,000, of which $47,800 will be expended in Atchison County and the remainder in Holt County, where a number of bridges will be necessary.

The major bridge job will be at the Tarkio river where a 120-foot span and approaches will be needed. This is estimated to cost about $34,580. It has not been learned here what time limit has been set for the contractors, although highway engineers say that it will require considerable time to complete the job as the stretch is twelve miles in length. Work is to start immediately.

The improvement will mean a continuous graded highway from Oregon northward to the nine-foot concrete pavement at Tarkio and Rock Port, and almost to the Iowa line. Only a small stretch of road, just north of Oregon will not be graded at that time. Paving is now in progress between Oregon and Savannah and the latter town was recently connected with St. Joseph by pavement.

Much Entertainment at Iowa State Fair

Events Of Eight-Day Program Range From Grand Opera To Hog Calling And Whippet Racing.

Des Moines, Aug. 11.—The complete entertainment program which will headline the events at the Iowa State Fair and National Livestock Show here for eight days and nights, beginning Aug. 27 was announced in its final form today by exposition officials.

Highlights on the program range all the way from Whippet dog racing to hog calling contests. Officials say it is the most comprehensive array of amusements that has ever been engaged for the big Iowa exposition. Among the chief features will be:

Five days of horse racing, with purses of more than $21,000, including one full day of running races on Saturday, Aug. 28.

Two days of auto races, Aug. 27 and Sept. 3, with eight races on each of the two days.

Six days of whippet dog racing—the first time this new sport has been witnessed in Iowa—with seven races each day.

Fifteen hippodrome features in front of the grandstand each afternoon and evening.

Eight bands, orchestras and durm corps, headlined by Thavin and His Band.

A big patriotic fireworks spectacle "1776," commemorating the 150th anniversary of American independence, each evening of the fair.

Four nights of society horse shows, Aug. 30 to Sept. 2.

Mlle. Joan La Costa, word's champion woman race driver, in an attempt to break the world's half mile track record on Friday, Aug. 27.

An entirely new midway, embracing thirty-two carloads of sideshows, riding devices and exhibits.

Arthur Middleton, baritone of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company in the "Birth of the Messiah," assisted by five other noted singers and a chorus of 40 voices, Sunday evening, Aug. 29.

Massenet's grand opera, "Herodiade" each evening in front of the grand stand, with widely-known singers and professional ballet.

A mid-season auto show of over one hundred 1927 models.

A state-wide hog-calling contest, old fiddlers' contest, team pulling contest and horseshoe pitching tournament.

Entertainment will be continuous each day of the fair from 9 a. m. until 11 p. m., officials have announced.

It is expected that more than 400,000 Iowa vacation-seekers will pass through the gates of the fair here when the big exposition opens the end of this month.

Blanket Invitation to Hay Fever Sufferers

More Than 200 Addicts Expected To Attend "National Convention" Of Sneezers At Duluth, Minn.

Duluth, Minn., August 11.—A blanket invitation to all sneezing addicts to attend the annual convention of the hay fever club was issued today by Fred Sears, president of the organization.

The convention will be held here August 20 and Sears expects more than 200 sufferers of hay fever to attend.

In issuing invitations for the convention, Sears stipulated several qualifications for membership, among them being:

Applicant must be a victim of hay fever.

"Must sneeze and cry at the sight of flowers, especially at their scent."

Medical authorities say Duluth is admirably suited as a haven of relief for hay fever victims.

Lumber Company at Graham Sues on Note

A note for $361.20 forms the basis for a suit filed in circuit court today by the Willis-Lucas Lumber Co. of Graham against F. E. Bleich. The note was made August 1, 1925, was for six months and carried interest at 8 per cent. According to the lumber company's petition, nothing ever has been paid, and it asks judgment for the full amount, with interest and an attorney fee of $40.

Ten Ways to Spend Time.

Mr. Morgan then outlined ten ways to spend leisure time. The first five of these were not harmful but do not yield particular returns. They are: pool halls, picture shows, dance halls, automobile riding, and parading the sidewalks.

"Now, there's nothing particularly wrong about any of these, but what improvement does one get from them?"

The speaker then outlined five ways of spending leisure time which he said would broaden the individual and make a better person of him.

The first of these is a bigger program of reading: literary and educational reasearch.

"There is no way in the world to better spend time than by reading good books. Not one minute is wasted."

Mr. Morgan discussed the "cheap" literature which is sold at so many news stands.

"The best way to clean up the news stands of the country is to clean up the minds of the people who read," he said.

Broader Athletic Program.

A broader recreational program was the second point. Mr. Morgan discussed athletics in schools and deplored the fact that eleven persons participate in football and 2,000 look on. He called for a reversal of this situation. Gymnasiums, swimming pools, and general physical education for all was his plea.

A greater enthusiasm for music was his third point.

"This is not a musical nation," he said. "Many people do not care for good music. Large musical organizations are financially a failure. And the reason is that the most of us do not understand good music and therefore do not enjoy it. How much enjoyment would you get from listening to a man talk Swedish for two hours if you could not understand a word?"

A greater interest in the little theatre, the drama league, or the home-talent play was his fourth point. He called for a more active participation in this line, and then passed to his final point:

A bigger and broader program of church and religious activities. Gymnasiums and swimming pools in the churches, things of great interest to everybody, and a widened program of activities were his arguments along this line.

Following the lecture, a large number of persons thronged around the speaker and plied him with question after question concerning his address

Pageant Given Today.

The program this afternoon was given by the Grosjean Company, marimbaphone artists, and by children of Maryville who participated in the pageant, "America Triumphant."

Chautauqua will end tonight with home-town movies, a concert by the Grosjean Company, and a five-reel picture, "The Home Town."

U. S. Crops This Year Will Be About Average

Washington, Aug. 11.—Farmers will produce average sized major food and feed crops this year despite unfavorable weather conditions that handicapped growth in the spring, the Agricultural Department forecasts.

Had weather conditions been favorable to the agriculture industry bumper crops would have been harvested this year, however. The corn, hay and oat crops are below average.

Planters sewed more potatoes this year than usual but because of the backward season the crop of spuds wil lnot be extra heavy. With a production of 15,000,000 bales of cotton forecast, there will be a surplus of this crop.

"One of the significant effects of this season's development is likely to be in the corn belt," the department stated. "A corn crop above average or slightly less will almost certainly be followed by a readjustment in the familiar balance between corn and hogs. If history repeats itself, pig production will be increased and the relative price effect next year will be in the direction of lower hogs and higher corn."

Wheat producers stand to make fully as large a gross income from their crop this year as last, the department estimated. The winter wheat crop is exceptionally heavy and the spring wheat production is forecast at somewhat less than the crop of 1925.

Fascinating Widow Causes Six Suicides

Budapest.—Charged with inciting six different young men to commit suicide, a young Budapest widow has been taken into custody by the local police.

A seventh, instead of yielding to her persuasive argument that "it would be beautiful to take poison and die in the arms of a beautiful woman," broke away from her embraces and rushed to th nearest police station.

The woman's mentality in wishing to have the young men die in her presence promises several weeks of interesting study to local psycho-analysts. The method which she employed was to induce her victims to commit suicide with her. To each she gave real poison while she drank a harmless potion of the same color.

Heavy English Taxes Cuts Whisky Drinking

London.—Whiskey consumption in England was only 12,074,000 gallons last year, a record low figure, excluding the two years of government control in 1918 and 1919, according to the report of William H. Ross, chairman and managing director of the Distillers' Company, Ltd.

Whisky-drinking has been growing less and less each year, he said. He held the high government taxes responsible, rather than any inclination toward temperance on the part of the consumers. Government taxes, he declared, are "gradually but surely bleeding the whiskey trade to death."
